

Since it would be virtually impossible for the patient/consumer to determine hospital staff that may or may not be in the mix of care giving, the care giving facility MUST be involved in helping make sure the course of care stays with 'in network' personnel.

A simple form involved at admittance would state the patient's health care provider plan; and further indicate patient will be notified if 'out of network' personnel will be used prior to care being given by said personnel.

Assuming non emergency situation, of course.

Regards,
Mark