

Hello,

I just read in the Morning Call newspaper an article about seniors asking the medical people if the services they were going to require was paid by medicare or their supplemental insurance. They received answers of yes only to find that was incorrect information and they were stuck with hundreds of dollars of bills through no fault of their own. This is wrong.

I hope you will consider the plan of when patients question their doctor to verify that they will be covered by medicare and their supplemental insurance, they will not be charged and the medical people providing their services must accept payment of whatever their supplemental insurance covers.

We seniors are living on a fixed income. Most can't afford thousands of dollars of unexpected bills.

Thank you.
